MALAYSIA AND SINGAPORE

IN BRIEF

The Federation of Malaysia came into existence consisting the eleven States of the Federation of Malaya, North Borneo (now Sabah) Sarawak and Singapore on September 16th. 1963. Common ties of race and language together with a common historical and geographical background knit these States together. Malaysia covers an area of about 12,308 square miles, occupying two distinct regions known as East and West Malaysia.

There is evidence that important Malay Kingdoms existed as early as the beginning of the Christian era. These Kingdoms were later conquered by Sri Vijaya of East Sumatra, the Majapahit Kingdom in Java, Thais from the North, the Dutch, the Portugese and finally the British East India Company took over by treaty. The three Settlements of Singapore, Malacca and Penang was transferred from the control of the East India Company to the Colonial Office in Britain in 1867, when the first set of stamps were issued with the name of Straits Settlements. The country entered an era of peace under the rule of a Sultan each with a British Adviser. In 1941 Malaya was captured by the Japanese and occupied until 1945.

On August 31st. 1957, Malaya became an Independent country with its sovereign, the Yang di-Pertuan Agong (King) elected amongst the rulers for a period of five years. While Singapore remained under the British with a new constitution introduced in 1959. Four years later the Federation of Malaysia was formed. On August 9th. 1965, Singapore became an Independent Republic State.

The people of Malaysia and Singapore are Malays, Chinese and Indians with a sprinkling of people of Portugese, Dutch or British decent. The main products of Malaysia are tin, rubber, palm oil and timber, while Singapore is one of the largest ports and industrial city in the South East Asia.
